

If your child is bullied, do the following

For parents

- Pay attention to changes in your child's emotions and behaviour.
- Inform the school immediately if you see or find out that someone is being bullied at school.
- You can also report bullying that has happened during free time if you think it may affect your child's school attendance. Also bring it up in discussions with the other parents concerned.
- Although you are worried about your child, try to think how the issue could be resolved well also from the point of view of the other children involved.
- If your child has been bullied, support your child. Encourage your child to talk about his/her experiences when the matter is dealt with at school.
- If your child has taken part in bullying, support your child in discussing the matter with teachers and the other children who were involved.

You can prevent bullying in advance in the following ways:

- Talk about bullying and its different forms with your child. Also talk about your child's friendships at school, during freetime and online.
- Familiarise yourself with the digital and social environments that your child uses.
- Practice media skills and the moderate use of social media and other technologies together with your child. If necessary, limit the time your child is allowed to spend online. Teach your child to behave in a friendly and appropriate manner also when online.

Did you know that:

- Your child is entitled to psychologist's and school social worker's services and to school health services. The specialists in these services also provide guidance to the parent.
- You have the right to receive information about your child's school attendance and wellbeing at school.
- Sometimes bullying leads to disciplinary or intervention measures, or criminal sanctions.
If this happens, there are certain legal routines that must be followed when hearing those parties who have been involved in the bullying, or when the parents are informed.
