This is how the activities of the National Forum for Skills Anticipation are organised

The National Forum for Skills Anticipation promotes interaction between education and working life

Term: 1 January 2017–31 December 2020

Members of the anticipation group

Each anticipation group has representatives of:

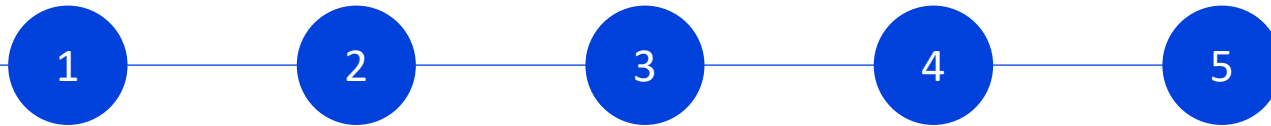

- employers
- employees
- entrepreneurs
- VET providers
- higher education institutions
- teaching staff
- research
- educational administration

Members of the anticipation group

Each group gathers its own free-form network of experts.
The expert networks widen the expertise of the anticipation groups.

Activities of the anticipation groups

The anticipation groups produce information on the competence, skills and educational needs of working life in the future.

The groups begin their work in five workshops that are supported with electronic collection of data.

Towards the end of the forum's term, the projects implemented include projects based on themes and phenomena and synthesis projects collecting anticipation data.

The tasks of the anticipation groups

Quantitative and qualitative anticipation

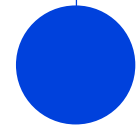

Analysing the changing competence and skills needs of working life

Proposing initiatives and giving recommendations for the development of education and training

Identifying continuums of education required by working life

Making proposals for research and development and bringing them up for discussion
